Head, School of Communication, Journalism and Marketing, 2013-2017.

Academic Leadership as Head, School of Communication, Journalism and Marketing, 2013-2017

As Head of School, I was responsible for the management of a large school of 58 academic staff, across three campuses, in the disciplines of Communication, Journalism and Marketing at Massey University. The school's revenue in 2017 was over 21 million dollars and there were currently over 1600 equivalent full time students in the school. Highlights of my leadership include the following:

1. Becoming the world's only three-year Bachelor of Communication programme to be accredited by the Association for Education in Journalism and Mass Communication, and only the third institution outside the U.S. in the 104 year history of the accreditation body.

2. Leadership in curriculum development in the form of the following:

- Significantly revising the Communication Management major in the Bachelor of Communication, for 2016
- Restructuring the Marketing Communication major in the Bachelor of Communication, to be implemented in 2016 and 2017.
- Initiating a 2016 review to strengthen the Journalism Studies major in the Bachelor of Communication.
- Replacement of the generic Communication major in the Bachelor of Business Studies with a completely redesigned Strategic Communication major, implemented in 2017.
- Augmenting our offerings at the undergraduate level by creating new classes on Risk and Crisis Communication, Persuasion, Branding, Customer Intelligence, Strategic Workplace Communication, and the Communication Capstone, all of which were offered successfully.
- Successfully lobbying for and developing a new class on workplace communication in the core of the Bachelor of Business Studies.
- The development of a Masters in Professional Public Relations, taught in executive-style mode starting in mid 2016, consisting of six new courses, all of which were co-taught by industry professionals.
- A significantly restructured transdisciplinary Masters of Communication offered across the School of Communication, Journalism and Marketing and the School of English and Media Studies, in early 2016.

3. Significantly increasing student numbers in the school every year of my leadership, despite an overall decline in the college and university, resulting in a budgetary increase for the school from 14 million NZD in 2013 to 21 million in 2017. This was achieved through:

- The creation of a 'southern spring' mid-year intake for the Masters of Management to enhance its attractiveness for international students.

- The successful promotion of and a subsequent increase in the number of students enrolled in the Masters of Journalism, already New Zealand's premier journalism program.
- The launch of the Masters of Analytics program with approximately 15 students in 2015, and over 30 students in 2016.
- The launch of the Bachelor of Retail and Business Management programme in 2015 with approximately 30 students enrolled in its first year, and a similar number in 2016.
- The appointment of a faculty member to a Director of Stakeholder Engagement position in Wellington in early 2014 to shore up student numbers in the Bachelor of Communication on that campus, and the subsequent successful 16% increase in student enrolment on that campus.

4. Creation of a collaborative governance structure across the School's three campuses, consisting of multiple associate heads and discipline coordinators.

5. Completely reconfiguring and systematizing the school's financial and budgeting process to facilitate growth and change.

6. Chairing recruitment of high-performing faculty between 2014 and 2017. I chaired recruitment committees that led to the successful recruitment of 18 academic teaching and research staff.

7. Cultural commitment: I actively committed the school to the Treaty of Waitangi, New Zealand's founding document and the defining feature of its race relations and bicultural multicultural identity, in the form of:

- Successful efforts to recruit two Māori members of academic staff in 2015.
- The production of a Matapono (a guiding framework) for communication pedagogy in the school that is grounded in a Māori worldview to be incorporated into all program reviews from 2015 onwards.
- The launch of a consultative project with Mana Whenua to create a Māori name for the school, Te Pou Aro Korero, formalized in early 2016.
- The incorporation of Tikanga (Māori protocol) into the School's formal written and oral communication practice.
- Initiating discussion around a minor in Māori Communication.

8. Strong support from faculty and staff for my leadership: consistently scored above 4.4 on a 5-point scale on two key performance measures: "I have trust and confidence in my head of school" and "my head of school has trust and confidence in me."
